

---

ad regarding Stradcom bonds today...

Posted by stockbert - 2007/04/26 07:23

---

any info on this? at the bottom of the ad, me disclaimer that it isn't meant to solicit buying or selling, yet it listed 3 the 3 bond issues and their respective terms and interest rates.

i asked a banker friend of mine, ang sabi daw, "formalities" lang daw siya, and they're not really issuing any bonds. kinda confusing for me: why go through the trouble of placing an ad, when you're more or less sure that the business section journalists are probably gonna write an article about it?

=====

Re: ad regarding Stradcom bonds today...

Posted by mickymac - 2007/04/26 17:15

---

any info on this? at the bottom of the ad, me disclaimer that it isn't meant to solicit buying or selling, yet it listed 3 the 3 bond issues and their respective terms and interest rates.

i asked a banker friend of mine, ang sabi daw, "formalities" lang daw siya, and they're not really issuing any bonds. kinda confusing for me: why go through the trouble of placing an ad, when you're more or less sure that the business section journalists are probably gonna write an article about it?

Err... what ad?? :?

=====

Re: ad regarding Stradcom bonds today...

Posted by Yamada Jiro - 2007/04/26 18:26

---

I wouldn't bother with bonds if I'm familiar with stocks.

=====

Re: ad regarding Stradcom bonds today...

Posted by Sherwin Go - 2007/04/26 18:56

---

Well bonds are good way to park your money. Stocks are more volatile, bonds still are better than time deposits.... DONT tell me all your wealth is in stocks thats suicide :lol:

=====

Re: ad regarding Stradcom bonds today...

Posted by Yamada Jiro - 2007/04/27 18:15

---

I didn't put all my money in stocks. I did leave money in the bank. We're all working for the banks, one way or another.

=====